WHITE WINE

SAUVIGNON BLANC & SEMILLON

One of the most popular white wines in the world, and a wine that every Sommelier thinks you should drink more of. At its best cool climate Sauvignon Blanc is a beautifully fresh, and aromatic wine showing a wide spectrum of flavours; whilst Australian Semillon whilst fresh, and citrus forward in its youth, develops into a golden wine of depth, and complexity after a few years of ageing.

AROMATIC VARIETIES

Some of the most misunderstood wines in the world. The majority of the Rieslings listed here are dry, the Pinot Gris' interesting and textured, and Gewurztraminer is a fantastic 'food wine'. The thing all these wines have in common is that the aromatics jump out of the glass with interest and intrigue.

CHARDONNAY

Chardonnay as a grape is somewhat of a blank canvas, it grows in a wide range of climates, and can hold up to a lot of wine making tricks and techniques, meaning the flavour profiles are as wide ranging as they are confusing. To minimize some of the confusion, we have split the wines into cooler and warmer climates. Cooler climates tend to produce fresher fruit flavours of citrus and apple, whilst warmer climates show ripe stone fruits and are broader on the palate.
